

Now Is the Time to Let Your Congressional Representatives Know Your Thoughts On Trade

Trade continues to be a high priority of the current administration. One proposal is to levy a "border tax adjustment" that could increase the cost of importing goods. In this regard, recently a group of retailers met with President Trump to discuss their concerns about the proposed border tax. Although they did not share the substance of their discussion with the president, they did say that the meeting was productive. Now is your opportunity to share your thoughts on this or other trade issues, including NAFTA, other free trade agreements, and imports from China.

We are available to assist you in contacting your representatives about the issues of concern to your company, by writing letters, making phone calls, and/or going to Washington to meet with them in person. If you are interested in forming a group or being a part of a group of companies interested in the same areas, we can help with that as well. Don't sit back and let new laws get passed without your input.
